Keynote Speaker: Stephanie Davis-Kahl is the Scholarly Communications Librarian and Associate Professor at The Ames Library at Illinois Wesleyan University. She provides leadership for the education, development, and support of scholarly communication programs and initiatives at Illinois Wesleyan. She works with students, faculty and staff to provide guidance on author rights, copyright, open access, and undergraduate student publishing. As the Managing Faculty Co-Editor of the Undergraduate Economic Review, she works closely with students on all aspects of the publishing process. She also provides research consultation, collection development and information literacy instruction to a number of departments at IWU, and is involved in faculty governance. She is also active in the Association for College and Research Libraries (ACRL). Her research interests include library publishing, undergraduate research, and scholarly communication programs at liberal arts colleges. She earned her BA in East Asian Studies from Oberlin College and her MS in Library Science from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.
